LAST OF CHIPPEWA WAR CHIEFS DYING

Head of One-Time Mighty Tribe is Now Living in Abject Poverty at Age of 128—Once Saved White Settlement from Massacre by Sioux

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 21.—Chief of the great Chippewa nation of Indians for 101 years, the oldest of the whites during the trying periods of early settlement, last of the grim Indian warriors the story of whose lives cast a romantic shimmer upon American history, Wa-be-na-aw-ee, known to his neighbors as Captain John Smith, an honorary name, is, it is said, the last summons in his little cabin on Mud lake, north of Deer River.

He is the last of the great Indian chiefs, the men who had to be reckoned with in the days when the nation was young. The old man, he falls upon evil days. There are none so poor as his days hence. He is the butt of the schoolboy's joke, the vine of curiosity, the momentary darling of the cashing tourist's eye. But time was when his arm was strong in battle, and his war cry carried dismay to the heart of the west. He is the last of the Sioux, the fiercest of the warriors of the west. He is the last of his tribe against this nation of marauders and blood victors on a dozen bloody fields. For nearly sixty years he was in the forefront of border warfare. As the unflinching friend of the whites he stood against his Indian brethren when the statesmen-like Sioux chiefs attempted to form an Indian confederacy dedicated to their destruction all along the western frontier. He has lost and won an empire in war.

Today, alone, having lived nearly twice the allotted time of man, he looks across the shadowy divide to the heaven of his race. In want nearly always, sometimes hungry, without the means to supply the primal craving of nature, he is the typical king of a race that has lost all but the last agony.

Tells of Early Minnesota.
His frame still bears evidence of a splendid physique, although he now weighs only 114 pounds. His face is deeply lined with wrinkles and marks that it seems only a mass of embers. Even his nose, which is a monster one, is wrinkled as if it were old.

When he can be persuaded to talk, which is not often, he tells many interesting tales of Minnesota before the days when white men first set foot on it. According to his story, Minnesota was known to all Indians as second only to the Great Hunting Grounds, the Indian heaven, in regard to the abundance of game. The forests were filled with elk, caribou, moose, deer and other large game, while anyone who could hold a bow could secure all the ducks he wanted. John has been chief of the Chippewas since he was twenty-seven years old. At that time this was one of the most powerful tribes in the northwest, but sickness and disease thinned its ranks. During the winter of 1833-34, according to his reckoning, the tribe, which called upon any part of Minnesota between the east and west boundaries and between the spot on where St. Cloud now stands and the Canadian line, was attacked by that most dreaded Indian scourge, small pox, and they died by hundreds.

During the fall of 1853 there was war on between the different tribes, the Sioux warring the Chippewas, the Chippewas warring the Ojibwas. During this time Chief Wa-be-na-aw-ee led his forces very effectively, killing large numbers of the Sioux, but on account of the many deaths the winter before his force was too small and they were finally compelled to retreat southward to where St. Cloud now stands.

The hunting being fairly good the tribe remained there until 1855. During this time white people, the first John never saw, came in and established a trading post and mission. The tribes were friendly to the whites and always remained so, the chief, himself, even giving a great liking for them and especially for their tobacco.

He conceived a great fondness for the white man "firewater," and said to relate, from an affidavit made according to the Indian manner of measuring wealth, having many skins and canoes, he came to abject poverty through purchasing rum. In describing the sensation of being intoxicated, he said that when filled with spirits he forgot the great wrong done him by the Sioux, the fact that his tribe which once rich and powerful, had become poverty stricken and weak; in fact, he felt at peace with the whole world, but, he said, making a motion toward his head, the sensation next day was horrible. Then "long time no see us," said John, but finally, nearly two, three weeks, he do it (expressing his love) all over.

The fact that the whites of St. Cloud established friendly relations with the Chippewas was to prove of inestimable benefit later on, however. In the fall of 1855, the Sioux having become weaker through battles with the whites, John thought it was safe to take his tribe back to the old camping ground around Grand Rapids, which he did. The tribes prospered here and every thing went well until 1859, the date of the Sioux uprising, when the New Minn massacre took place. Rumors were sent out by the Sioux asking if the other tribes to join them in exterminating the white people. Of all

PORT MANN is the officially proclaimed Pacific Coast terminal of the Canadian Northern Pacific Railway.

PORT MANN is the only fresh water terminal port on the Pacific Coast. Port Mann comprises 2000 acres, has two and a half miles of waterfront and runs back from the Fraser River one mile and a quarter to the Hjoth Road. Fifteen hundred acres of the townsite of Port Mann has been cleared and grading for subdivisions is now being completed. the Canadian Pacific railway, and a station on the Crow's Nest Pass branch of the same railway. The location of Golden is midway between the ranges of the Rocky and Selkirk mountains, just where the Kicking Horse river joins the mighty Columbia. The entire length of the railway is in the neighborhood of 500 miles, and the whole of the distance it runs through the province of British Columbia that is particularly rich in all natural resources. They have all had dominant within transportation facilities for the development. They constitute timber lands, huge deposits of low-grade mineral, and magnificent stretches of rough land preeminently suitable for farming, ranching and the growing of hardy varieties of fruit. The route of the railway will, for its entire length, be along the far— and valleys of the Columbia and Kootenay rivers. In addition to the many possibilities in the working up of a good line of freight haulage, the construction of the railway will open up a part of the country well known for its scenic beauties, and that will attract a part along with Alouette, will be in great deal of tourist travel. In fact, some enthusiasts are so sanguine as to speak of this immediate part as about to be the rival of some of the more famous resorts of Switzerland, not forgetting the peculiar attractions of the Selkirk winter sports of St. Moritz. Another all-important purpose which the Canadian Pacific railway is said to have in view, and with which object they have made preliminary surveys is to obtain an easier grade to the west than that at present enjoyed by them by making a railway west across Earl Gray, or Wells Pass, up the Tumbler Ridge, one of the main tributaries of the Columbia river near its source, and then down the western slope of the Selkirk to Kootenay lake.

else, at the outlet of that river, will not be overlooked. The chances for the most important place, however, all lean towards Invermere as the commercial metropolis of the valley, with Alouette, which immediately adjoins it and lies under its protecting wing, as a place for the company's yards and industrial works.

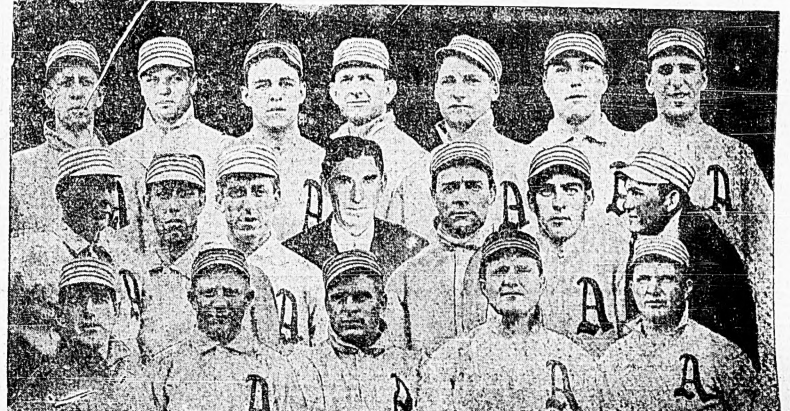

EMPLOYER ORDERED TO PAY POLL TAX

Employers of labor may be made responsible for the payment of the poll taxes of their employees, according to the decision handed down in police court this morning by Magistrate Gowan. T. Gowan, of the Edmonton Ironworks, who has been fighting the case in the court for several weeks, having refused to pay the poll taxes of 16 of his workmen who themselves had declined to pay, this morning appeared in his own defence, and at the conclusion of the hearing the magistrate ordered the defendant to pay the sum of $18, to behalf of six of the men. The balance of the 16 either have left town or are under 21 years of age.

THE AIRSHIP'S PART IN FUTURE WARS

Parisian Invents Machine Which is Far Superior to Any Aircraft Now in Use—Will Carry 400 Passengers—Britain Orders Machines from France

The Airships of the Future.—As planned by myself, the new airship will have accommodations for 100 persons, and will be capable of flying aloft for at least a week. She will be fitted with fifteen motors, each developing 180 h.p., and this arrangement will enable her to travel at a speed of 40 miles an hour, and thus in 40 miles

This complete change of official attitude is primarily due undoubtedly to the fact that the German military and army simultaneously in France and Italy have been able to make use of the balloon observation post. This practice has been taken in this country of the part played by aeroplanes at those fronts. It is therefore not surprising in utilizing the heavier than air marketable balloons in the air.

It is, however, most important to judge this from the fact that at the present time the German balloon platoon the Kaiser, in one of his characteristic speeches, declared that the balloons of the German army in Germany was quite insufficient.

A few days later a second official statement was issued, stating that there would be a substantial increase for the purpose of aeroplanes and balloons in the German army voted last year. Similarly in the German army, the military aviation was at once raised to nearly £3,000,000.

It is, therefore, quite naturally with its British government's decision to give up further experiments with balloons, and to turn to the more modern engine of noble birth, Baron von Zeppelin, has just long granted patents for the construction of a dirigible, which promises to be a success— if the invention is successful.

Another wonderful feature of Baron Zeppelin's projected airship is that it is not only invisible, but absolutely invisible. It is by the method of equalization of light and shadows, which is the principle that is possible to secure invisibility for airships while in the air.

It is by the method of the casting of a mode of chromium, a metal possessing a highly polished surface, which is transparent to light, and is a transparent material. Therefore the airship is invisible to the eye, and it is by reflection light the invisibility obtained. The surface and sides of the airship are covered with a material which reflect the same color—bright or dark—according to the weather and the light.

It is with the lower part of the polished balloon, which reflects the earth, and the upper part of the balloon the invention was encountered.

Being darker than the sky the result is that the airship is invisible to the large observer to stand out prominently in the light of the sun.

This difficulty of observation, which is the sides of the boat, which is to be made of a material which is made of mirrors, and by placing on the triangular longitudinal ribs. With the aid of the mirrors, the airship is invisible to the shades of the air into the lower part of the balloon and thus invisible to the eye.

born Boone, who has already designed and built a number of dirigibles, believes he has solved the problem posed on the equal distribution of air. The lighter-than-air vessel, according to his number of patents, would be able to rise and fall as needed, according to the number of balloons attached to it. The balloons would be attached to the dirigible by a cable, and the dirigible would be able to rise and fall as needed, according to the number of balloons attached to it. The balloons would be attached to the dirigible by a cable, and the dirigible would be able to rise and fall as needed, according to the number of balloons attached to it.

The "Kaderor" will present Jewish questions, which it will treat from a broad standpoint. The first number augurs well for the success of the venture. It is well "got up," and attracts the reader, both from a literary point of view and a typographical.

FRASER LAKE IS CHARMING RESORT

New G. T. P. Townsite In Central
B. C. Has Many Attractive Features

At the head of the vast system of navigable waters of central British Columbia lies Fraser lake. The Fraser river, Nechako river and the tributaries make 1,000 miles of navigable streams and lakes. The lake itself is a beautiful sheet of water, abounding in salmon and trout and other game fish, with wooded shores full of big and small game of all kinds indigenous to the country. It has long stretches of sandy beaches, lovely islets, and in fact all the makings of a charming summer resort.

On the shores of this ideal inland water the Grand Trunk Pacific railway company has located and surveyed the townsite of Fraser Lake. This future city lies about 130 miles west of Fort George and has a vast district adjoining it eminently suitable for fruiting and the raising of stock, grain and timber. Valuable coal deposits have been located within nine miles of the townsite, and there are probabilities of much more nearer. At Fort Fraser the Hudson's Bay company has grown crop of oats, timothy and vegetables for fifty years, and the federal government has a forestry authority too, stating that in all that time a crop failure has been unknown.

O. U. Bley, the land commissioner of the G. T. P., considers that Fraser Lake will be one of the most important points in the interior of British Columbia. The townsite is situated on the shore of this townsite is the depositing by the Grand Trunk Pacific of 5 per cent of the gross sale of the lots in the townsite with a trust company, which will be turned over to a committee upon the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific board of trade when such board of trade has a bona fide membership of 25 or over, residents of Fraser Lake. The said trust funds are to be used in improving the townsite, in buying suitable location of town hall, waterworks, etc.

The townsite of Fraser Lake is now being put on the market and is already occupying the attention of investors. The well-known real estate firm of McLeod, McLeod & Co., Vancouver, are the agents of the G. T. P. in putting this property on the market.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 21.—Prominent society folk filled St. John's Episcopal church at noon today for the wedding of Miss Ethel Anderson, daughter of Joseph Longworth Anderson, and Dr. Henry Clark Thateur of New York. The bride is a cousin of Representative Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, and also of Larz Anderson, the United States minister to Belgium. Dr. Thateur is well known in medical circles and was formerly on the staff of the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

Official Averages of W. C. L.

The Western Canada League averages given below have just been released by the president of the league. They show but little of interest owing to the fact that the W. C. L. season has been ended for such a long period. Johnnie Mackin, the Esquimaux second sacker, shows up well, as does also "Chesty" Cox. Edmonton takes third in hitting and second in fielding.

Preparations for Indian Durbar About Complete

Pageantry and Pomp Will Proclaim Accession of King Emperor—Vast Sums of Money to Be Expended on Celebration

(Globe Cable Service)
Calcutta, Oct. 16.—According to the detailed program of the arrangements for the Durbar, the Royal train will arrive from Bombay at the railway station in the Selimgarh station of the Fort at Delhi on the morning of December 7. Their Imperial Majesties will be received on the platform by their Excellencies the governor-general and Lady Hardinge, the governors and heads of provinces, the commander-in-chief, members of the executive council of the governor-general and the high officers, military and civil, of government. After the high officers have been presented by his Excellency the Governor-General, their Imperial Majesties will proceed to a pavilion within the fort wall where the ruling chiefs will have the honor of being presented.

The Imperial Majesties will, after this, move in a procession from the fort through the principal streets of the city to the Bikaner, where they will be greeted before proceeding to their camp by the representatives of British India in a special pavilion.

Order of Procession.
The procession from this fort will be formed in three portions. First, the procession of the governors, lieutenant-governors, and chief commissioners of the central provinces; second, the royal procession; third, the procession of ruling chiefs. The first portion of the procession will move to the pavilion on the Bikaner, while the ruling chiefs are being presented. Special arrangements have been made for Punjabi Indians of high rank to see this procession, and also for school children, to whom a place on the route has been allotted. A number of stands for spectators will be erected along the route by the Delhi municipality, from whom places will be procurable. Seats reserved for the pavilion on the Bikaner will be reserved in the pavilion on the Bikaner for official guests and the families of officers, military and civil, on duty.

Visits from Ruling Chiefs.
The King-Emperor will receive visits from the principal ruling chiefs on the afternoon of December 7, and on the mornings of December 8 and 9. On the afternoon of the 8th the Imperial majesty will pay the following:

LOGAN BLADES.

Logan Blades with his steady stride,
(And he hasn't very big feet.)
Has brought all the honor on Skowood's side,
And he's pretty hard to beat.
He goes just like a cannon ball,
Shot from a ten-pound gun,
And everyone knows his "Clear the track!"
When Logan starts to run.
When he hears the noise of the pistol,
Which starts every race,
He makes a dash for the line ahead
In a steady, long-stride pace,
And Norwood has the cup again.
We've had it before this, too.
Hurray for Logan and his good legs!
Three cheers for the Red and Blue!

ADDRESS BEFORE PRISON CONGRESS

PRISON CAMPS ARE PROVEN A SUCCESS IN NEW ZEALAND—PRISONERS MORE HEALTHY

(Special to the Capital.)

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 20.—One of the most interesting and enlightening discourses yet heard at the American Prison association congress was presented today by James A. Kynell, advisory director of the prison department, department of Justice, of Wellington, New Zealand. He told of the New Zealand expert in free-planting as an occupation for prisoners.

"In the year 1900," he said, "the minister of justice, the Hon. James McEwen, decided to test the experiment of employing prison labor in connection with the afforestation scheme that was being carried out by the New Zealand government. With this object, he established four prison camps, two in the North Island and two in the South Island. One of these camps was closed after a few years, but the other three have steadily increased in size and are today playing a very important part in the prison system of the country. Although these camps have been established for only eleven years, they have had a very interesting history and provided much data of importance to the penologist."

"The objects of the camps are twofold. First, to provide healthy and useful occupation for prisoners and second, to accomplish useful labor for the state without coming into competition with free labor. Both of these objects have been attained. The sites chosen for the camps are at a considerable distance from dense population and in districts noted for their invigorating climate. The prisoners are out all day working at hard manual labor either on the hills or the plains. They develop keen appetites and sleep well. The result is a rapid improvement in physique, a much more contented mind and the formed habit for sustained industry. The state also benefits considerably, for every year several hundred thousands of trees are planted on an otherwise barren soil. The work does not compete with free labor inasmuch as the government could never get a sufficient number of men to take up the work under such conditions as are necessary to make it a possible undertaking. Free laborers would not regard it as a relief work and the cost of sending such men long distances for a few weeks' employment and then bringing them back would be an unthinkably proposition."

"Every prisoner has a separate hut or cell, and a single cell in a two-celled hut. With the exception of such cases as are required for the work about the camp and the vegetable garden, all the prisoners are engaged either in tree planting or afforestation work. The men go out in gangs of ten under the charge of one officer. Some gangs have to work at a distance of from three to four miles from the camp."

"As a rule very few other than first offenders are sent. Experience has proved that the old offender does not appreciate any advantages that may be offered to him and this example tends to have a bad effect upon the camp. There are many who are sent to the camps through their sentence as quickly as possible and almost all of them. There are suitable for camp. They are given an understanding that besides the ordinary remission, equal to one quarter of the sentence after probation, they can earn an extra remission of ten days for every year of their sentence passed in camp."

"As a rule the prisoners justify the confidence placed in them. Some prove themselves remarkably trustworthy and will be out all day working some miles from the camp without any supervision and return at night having done a good day's work. This has been the case several times with men sent gathering fire wood. They state that time spent industriously in time quickly passed and so it is in a double sense, for these men invariably receive a reduction of their sentence over and above all that can be gained under rehabilitation."

"The men improve in physique and become established in habits of industry. As far as can be observed a fair average number of men, upon their discharge, honestly seek work and are not afraid of laborious tasks. Being well set up and muscular, they are not so easily attracted by vicious habits as they might otherwise be."

Their life in the open air gives them a dislike for the atmosphere of their places. Consequently a good number of them remain in the country districts, or work on road contracts or the farms."

"Moreover about 1100 prisoners have passed through the camps and about twenty-two millions of feet of work on road contracts or the farms."

PRICE OF PUGILISM PROVES VERY HIGH

STRATHCONA MAN CONTRIBUTES $31.50 TO CITY IN ADDITION TO LOSING HIS POSITION.

Strathcona, Oct. 21.—Porter Dickson, who yesterday an employee at the Strathcona hotel, it appears, has some claim to ability in the pugilistic line, but this accomplishment was repaid yesterday for his entanglement in the meshes of policemen, the payment of a tidy sum of good, but expensive cash, and the loss of his position. Wednesday night one Alfred Johnson was ejected from the hotel by Porter, Mr. Dickson, who proceeded to beat up his victim in a rather serious extent. For this example of ring-side art Dickson was ordered by the magistrate to die down to the extent of a $30 fine with an attachment of $5.00 by way of costs. But the day ended not there. One D. Jordan, so it seems, is credited with being a handy manipulator of the five-omers and when the story of Dickson's prowess reached him at the Dominion he strode down to the Strathcona and called left hooks and jabs the discussion of the fight into a meeting in physical combat. Out of this Dickson emerged with a desire to submit his rival with the same official treatment experienced by himself during the morning. Jordan, however, stepped at the safe end of the legal round, while Dickson took another count from the magistrate of $4.00. Also he lost his position.

STRATHCONA LOCALS

While Avenue west now presents a fine appearance as far as Fifth Street, the pavement has been completed upon the extension of three blocks west of Second Street. The building work was completed yesterday upon this section of the year's contract and a move is being made to the east end, where the cement foundation is nearly all in place.

A large force of workmen are now employed in the truckery north of the city. The present siding to the K. M. is being shifted to a new line to the bridge to be run through from the station without a switch. The grade has been consolidated, widened and the chance to provide half for two tracks across the street right of way on First Avenue north.

City Engineer McLean expects to have his business in such shape to first Avenue south back of the new post office building.

Sunday upon the week's tour of inspection through Saskatoon, Regina, Moose Jaw and Calgary. The engineer is deputized by the council to particularly investigate paving work in these cities, but he will also inquire into other municipal matters which might prove of value to his department in this city. This will be the first trip of inspection made by Mr. McLean in four years.

Perhaps the most important social event in celebration of Hallowe'en will be held in the Y. M. C. rooms on the night of the 31st. The members of the local Y. M. C. A. will join with the members of the Y. M. C. A. in carrying out a program of entertainment for the evening. This program is now in preparation in the hands of committees and the event will doubtless prove a very enjoyable one. As the result of a successful good progress the cement sidewalks came across the two blocks along Second Avenue north from Main street west and the two blocks along First street west last week and are now busy to first Avenue south back of the new post office building.

PRESS AGENTS SAY

"THE EARL OF PAWTUCKET."

If you want to enjoy an evening of delicious drubbery and humor and see a comedy pure and simple in which all seriousness has been laid aside, you will enjoy "The Earl of Pawtucket," by Augustus Thomas, which John Hart has made an elaborate revival of this season, and is presenting. Lawrence O'Driscoll in his original role of Lord Carlington. The star will be supported by a merry company of players including some of the original Madison Square Theatre company who were with Mr. O'Driscoll when the play was first given in New York. The play comes to the Empire Theatre November 2, 3, and 4.

The story of the comedy concerns a member of the British nobility, Lord Carlington, who is depicted as an extremely humorous gentleman by O'Driscoll. His Lordship follows Harriet Forde, the divorced wife of Montgomery Putnam, to New York from England to win her love. He wishes to conceal his identity to avoid the seeking woman, and travels under the name of Putnam, after he had obtained permission from the husband to use the name. The Lord is arrested by the wife's attorney and gets into lots of trouble through the misapprehension, but finally extricates himself from an uncomfortable position and brings his mission in America to a successful conclusion in an appropriate way. The story is acted in one day and the scenes are laid in a well known New York hotel. Without any breaking of continuity, queer grimaces and grotesque episodes the comedy is undeniably funny.

NORDICA CONCERT.

The seats are selling very fast for the Nordica concert, and it is only a matter of a few days and the culture house will be gone. As there are a number of persons that are on the list that have not selected their seats and the management of the Theatre does not want to take that responsibility of doing so, they would deem it a great favor if they would call at the box office.

HOME OF KINEMACOLOR.

The Kinemacolor pictures which have been creating a sensation on their first appearance in this country, and will be shown in Edmonton starting Monday, October 23, have as their scene in London one of the most famous theatres of the world.

The old house came into existence 17 years ago when, in 1768, it was erected on a portion of the site by Jean Pasquall. It was comparatively hard built.

However, in spite of the smallness of the old house, it achieved the distinction of bringing before the public some of the most distinguished players of the day. Here appeared Mrs. Fanny, Mrs. Waghall, Mrs. Fitzwilliam, the charming Mrs. Nesbitt, and the long to be remembered Madame Goleman who made her first appearance in

CITY HALL NOTES

England: Madame Velris and Charles Mathews were frequently seen on the boards of the old house.

The late Wilson Barrett wrote a most interesting account of his early boyish attempts at acting and his first appearance as a professional on its boards, when still known as the "Queens Theatre." Later on, happily still with us, John Hare, Ellen Terry, The Kendals, Porters, Robertson, and passed away, including Charles Goddard, John Clayton and Arthur Geell, were prominently associated with its career.

Here it was that the fascinating Marie Wilton (Lady Bancroft), in the vigor and effectiveness of youth, in the height of her popularity, as the leading actress of the day, made her brilliant transition to comedy, which attracted an epoch in the drama of the 19th century.

Here was produced the celebrated Robertson Comedies, while the sumptuous revival of the "School for Scandal," in 1874, induced Mr. Bancroft (as he was then) to become the inventor of the 10 shilling stall. Although Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft now enjoy a well-merited retirement, only broken by efforts on behalf of charity, their distinguished names will always be held in honorable esteem.

Always a favorite with loyalty, it was frequently visited by the late King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra (when Prince and Princess of Wales) and by members of the royal family, including the venerable Duchess of Cambridge. It was in the little house that Frederick Lamaitre appeared, that Napoleon and O'Driscoll rubbed shoulders with Dickens and Thackeray, that once there was a difficulty finding a seat for Gladstone, and that Beaconsfield received memorable ovation.

There is an exceptionally heavy exodus of apartment from the city this week in quest of prairie chickens and ducks. With scarcely more than another sack of chicken shouting reminding the gamester an making special efforts to get their season's bag.

Th difficulty which has been met with in obtaining a supply of gravel is given by W. G. Arthur, contractor for the murses' home at the isolation hospital, as a reason for delay in the completion of the contract. The work was to have been completed by the end of this month, but come to the difficulties which have been met with, it is stated that this will now be impossible.

In a report to the commissioners this morning, the city engineer recommended that the time be extended for twenty days. The contractors asked thirty day. Mayor Armstrong will take the matter up.

Geo. E. Turner, building commissioner for the school board, wrote the commission this morning to ask that the sewer and water service be extended to block 91, Parkdale, at the earliest possible date, as it is desired to proceed with the new school. Mr. Geo. E. Turner saw Joseph K. Edwards, engineer.

E. E. Edwards wrote asking a rebate on the local improvement taxes in respect to boulevard. He had a home yard in front of his house before the city engineer's department had undertaken the boulevarding of the whole street, and claims that the sum of $29.16, which is assessed against him is $10.00 too large. The communication was laid on the table.

Chief Lander will be allowed to resign seven men for the staff of No. 1, first, which, he reported this morning, is now nearing completion. One of the men will be an experienced driver, and another an experienced driver.

A communication from the Cardiff coal company asked the money withheld by the city on their contract, was referred to city solicitor Brown.

SUNDAY EVENING CONCERT

The Citizens' Band will give a concert tomorrow evening in the Lyceum Theatre, beginning at 8:15 o'clock. A carefully prepared program has been arranged, and will include such numbers as "Marianne," grand selection by Wallace, and "Fra Diavolo," by Ambler. The band will have the assistance of Mr. H. E. Turner, who will contribute two vocal selections, while Mr. Vernon W. Barford will preside at the piano.

THE "BOSSY" FATHER (By Winifred Black.)

"You are eighteen; your sister is twenty; you both work downtown. Your father makes you give all of the money you make to him and he will not allow you one visitor or one girlish amusement or pleasure."

"You have no friends, you say; no amusements, and he does not let you own money to you if you want the material for a new frock."

"When you get your two weeks' vacation from your downtown work he makes you stay at home and he will work about the house as a way to rest. Your mother, you say, is a martyr."

"What are you going to do about it? Sit down and cry?"

"You are an independent American girl, not English; you are the barren of your father or of any one else. Why don't you tell that father of yours to wake up, and let you wake up right now?"

"Don't quarrel with him; don't point him out to your mother as if it were his; do not tell him that he refused to let you go somewhere that you really say is perfectly proper for you to go."

"None of these things will do the least bit of good. They really do harm. A man like that loves to see you made unhappy. It makes him feel important."

"What's your salary day? Monday? Then next salary day you agree with your board of account with it. When you go home, show the book back to your father. Tell him you can get perfectly good board in the neighborhood for six dollars a week, and that you will pay him that sum for your board at home. If he agrees to this, pay him the money with the discount, understanding that he is making a deal for board, and that you will pay it only as long as you like your boarding place. When you don't like it you go to some place else."

"Tell him that you are of age, and that you intend to use your own money; that he would have to let it if you were both boys, and very little of it would be lost in that case. When you want to go anywhere as your mother what she thinks about it."

"You are of age, you know, both of you, and he has no more right to your money than he would have to it if you were both boys, and very little of it would be lost in that case. When you want to go anywhere as your mother what she thinks about it."

"Don't let your father know that you ask her; it might get her into trouble, but ask her just the same. She doesn't know as much about these things as you do, but she does know about the world, after all."

"Don't ask your mother about it. Just say, quite as a matter of course, that you are going—don't ask. If he's cross, don't notice him. If he's disagreeable, just go to your room; if he's violent, run up an express wagon and move to the other boarding house."

"If your father were weak and old or ill and helpless you would owe him your homewardness. He is, you say, none of these things; just overbearing and intolerably 'bossy.'"

"Let him boss the cat—and take it out that way."

"The longer you encourage him in his absurd ideas the harder it will be for you and your mother and sister. Don't quarrel, don't argue, don't cry, don't cry—do—and you won't have to do it at all."

Unfair Discrimination By Chester Finkins

I cannot purchase in a shop. A trusty gun to shield my person. No gentle burglar now may shop. MY shoes, that have been put a curse on. Then why can Mame or Mamie or Ella, Unquestioned, purchase an UMBRELLA?

I cannot walk the midnight street. With me a dagger in my pocket. My arsenal, so bright, complete. Is void—but I can't even peek it. Then why, to women, can they sell a Dead-dealing terrible umbrella?

Born up at dead of dreadful night. I have to let the robbers loot me. If I put up a show of fight, Instead of being shot, they shoot me; but THAT'S far better for a fella Than being stabbed with an umbrella.

Pair woman climbs the subway stairs— Bunnies in one hand, skirts in other. And who's ever behind her fares? She'll sail through her human brother. For 'neath her arm there'll always be Sharp, backward-fitted, black umbrella.

THAT'S when it's DOWN; but when the rain Comes her grimly to unfold it, Oh! There's the time of death and pain! (Who else she's got a man to hold it? Then, facing it, say, who can tell a Spiked battering ram from an umbrella?)

I, bearing weapons, never slow A living thing, yet I was happy In thinking of what I MIGHT do. If they were useful to be. Katy and Stella. Why can they carry an umbrella?

In a drunken brawl on the G.T.P. grade elated mile west of Enterville, a robber snatched Wilson shot and killed J. Brackman. Wilson was placed under arrest a few hours later by Constable Marshall of the R.N.W.M.P. He will be detained at Edworthy pending an inquest, to be held by Dr. Poria on Monday.

SEEK MANIAC FOR LOVER'S LANE CRIME

SERIES OF MURDERS AND ATTACKS WHICH HORRIFIED OKLAHOMA
WORK OF A MANIAC

Shawnee, Okla., Oct. 21.—Investigation of the latest of a series of six crimes along the beautiful stretch of highway known as Lover's Lane, between Shawnee and Broken Park, has strengthened the belief that a maniac may have committed deeds for which others are suffering penalties.

The road, which of late has been rechristened the "Highway of Crime," runs along the second bend of the station river. In most places it is bordered on one side by a heavy growth of trees and on the other by clay banks. Frequently it crosses the river on wooden bridges.

At one time this road was the most popular thoroughfare leading into the city and was much used by pleasure riders at night. It is now deserted from sundown to sunrise.

The latest victim in the series of crimes is Quetta Hughes, fourteen years old, who recently visited Broken Park in company with her nephew, Clifford Hughes, twenty-one years old. The couple started driving to Shawnee about 8 o'clock in the evening. Just before reaching the bridge, where the assault took place, the father broke and Hughes got out to fix it.

They then drove a short distance further and across the bridge. A man appeared on an abutment and fired a shot. The bullet entered Hughes' back and passed through the body, penetrating a lung. He fell, unconscious. Screaming, the girl jumped from the buggy and ran into a cotton field. She was followed by the assailant, who began beating her with the whip. Her skull was fractured in several places and her left arm broken. She and her nephew are recovering.

The couple were driving to Shawnee after spending the evening at Broken Park. It was a moonlight night. They stopped here to have a drink and the father was standing on a bridge, when as he turned to look back he saw a man in a dark coat and hat running toward them. He ran for the buggy after seeing his companion fall, drove to town and informed the police of what had taken place. The police searched and found Miss Colchase's body in a clump of bushes beside the road with a bullet hole through her head.

Gorman was arrested charged with the murder on the strength of the fact that he told a disconnected story on the night of the crime. He was sent to the penitentiary at McAlester, where he is serving a life sentence.

Jesse Edgington, sixteen years old, and Charles Hubbard sent July 4, 1910, to Broken Park, about dusk, they strolled along the highway a quarter of a mile and sat down on a broken hayrack beside the road. A man fired two shots from behind them and both lodged in a telephone pole near the road. Miss Edgington ran up the road and Robert deserted her and ran back to the park. When search was made Miss Edgington was found unconscious beside the Santa Fe railroad track about three hundred feet from the road. Her injuries were similar to those of the Hughes girl. Her clothing had been torn to shreds and she had been beaten. She recovered.

Robert was tried on circumstantial evidence, charged with assault with intent to kill, and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. He appeared and the case is still pending.

A little over a year ago Mrs. Victoria Page, a white man, her sixteen-year-old daughter and "Willie" Gorman, an Indian, were walking from Broken Park to Shawnee. About a mile from the party they sat down beside the road to rest. The daughter and the Indian on one side of the road and Mrs. Page and her companion on the other. A shot was fired at Mrs. Page and her companion from behind. The bullet passed through the man's arm and lodged in Mrs. Page's heart. The Indian was arrested and tried, and although the daughter testified that the Indian did not do the shooting, he was convicted on circumstantial evidence, chiefly because the crime could not be accounted for in any other way. He is now serving a life sentence in the penitentiary.

A near tragedy which closely resembles the Hughes case in every particular occurred when Charles McDaniels was shot through the back and his companion was dragged from the buggy by an assassin and beaten. The girl recovered. No arrests were made.

The first of these crimes occurred on the road two years ago. Harry Barklow and a girl companion were found morning lying in the road, several hundred feet apart. Each had a bullet through the head. The girl had been badly beaten, supposedly with a gun. This mystery was never unravelled, no clues were found. The double suicide theory was advanced, but finally discarded.

PRISONER IS FOUND GUILTY BY JURY

SENTENCE WILL NOT BE GIVEN UNTIL END OF COURT—COUNSEL ASKS FOR RESERVED CASE

Charged with an unpeppable crime, W. Hall, arrested at Edison some time ago, was this afternoon found guilty by the jury after being out for an hour and fifty-five minutes. Prisoner will be sentenced at the end of this court term. C. C. McGaul, for the defence has applied for a reserved case.

C. C. McGaul in summing up for the defence, addressed the jury for forty-five minutes this morning. He contended that the whole list of charges against Hall, was the outcome of an abominable conspiracy, to "put him out of business," and make it necessary for him to leave the country. The whole circumstance indicated that the laying of the charges was "a framed up" affair, on the part of Hall's enemies. Had the crimes actually been committed, medical testimony should have been forthcoming, but the crown had omitted to bring out medical evidence of any kind.

"In an Anglo-Saxon country a man would feel it a lesser shame to be arraigned on a charge of murder than this crime," said McGaul, coming on to contend that in view of the seriousness of the charge, not unless proof were absolute, beyond the shadow of a doubt, should a verdict of "guilty" be brought in. Making reference to the Scottish verdict of "not proven," Mr. McGaul said that the equivalent of this verdict in English law was "not guilty."

E. B. Cogswell, crown prosecutor, then addressed the jury at length, and after Justice Simmons had charged the jury the court adjourned until 2 o'clock.

CAUGHT IN BELTING.
George Tudmore, a workman at the Alberta Creamery, First street, was caught in the machinery this afternoon and terribly mangled. He was removed to the hospital where the doctor in attendance stated that he would lose one leg and that there were grave doubts as to whether he would recover.

NEW SCHOOL DISTRICTS.
Four new school districts were created in the province during the month, which closed on September 30. They are Medicine Valley, Garfield, Gurners school, and Hucacac. The Swan Lake school district has been reduced in area owing to increasing population and the creation of new districts.

Fourteen school districts have been empowered to borrow money to a total amount of $140,000. Medicine Valley has given power to borrow $100,000.

The Village of Blairmore has been created a municipality.
